Reading For Preaching The Preacher

In Reading for Preaching Cornelius (Neal) Plantinga makes a singular claim: preachers who read fine writing will likely become deeper and defter preachers. In his own winsome writing style Plantinga shows how a general reading program benefits preachers.

Plantinga sets a bar for preachers to be wide readers, shows the values of wide reading, and then even gives some practical works with which to start. And with it being so short, you can read in an afternoon and have your appetite whet for other reading. Some quibbles aside (mainly, I love reading books. I also love reading books about reading.

First, he says, good reading generates delight, and the preacher who enters the world of delight goes with God. Good reading can also help tune the preacher's ear for language -- his or her primary tool. General reading can enlarge the preacher's sympathies for people and situations that she or he had previously known nothing about.

This week's reading contains a couple of potentially difficult metaphors. First, consider verse 6: "If you had faith the size of a mustard seed, you could say to this mulberry tree, 'Be uprooted and planted in the sea,' and it would obey you" (verse 6; see also Matthew 17:20; 21:21-22; Mark 11:22-24). To be frank,...
